Charter Committee Planning Campaign

The Redwood City Charter Committe, composed originally of members of the board of freeholders which prepared the proposed city charter, and of which Paul A. McCarthy is chairman, met at the city hall and prepared plans for securing the support of the people for the charter. Arrangements were made to have speakers address the service clubs and other organizations of the city on the charter prior to the election which is to be held on April 9.

A contest is being sponsored by the committee for essays on the new charter. Several valuable cash prizes have been offered for the best essays on the proposed charter.

A strong effort is to be made to gain a large vote at the charter election, although no opposition has been made to the proposed change in government. "It is always possible," McCarthy said, "that an eleventh hour opposition may develop, and every precaution should be taken to avoid such a contingency here."

San Carlos Folks Want Cheaper Rate

Hope that lower water rates might be secured for San Carlos was expressed at a meeting of citizens of that city held at the school house Tuesday evening. The club was instituted by John McDonald of San Francisco, district governor of the fourth district of Lions International, comprising California, Nevada and Hawaii. In explaining the features of the Lions organization, McDonald said, "Lionism takes an active interest in the civic, commercial, social and moral welfare of the community, and invites its members in the bonds of friendship, good fellowship and mutual understanding.

Conditions at the city pound are to be investigated by the city council as the result of a report to Councilman Z. T. Thorning that the dogs at the pound were not fed and that they were killed in a shorter time than that required. Dogs were being kept for only 48 hours or less, Thorning stated, which was too short a time for people to reclaim their dogs. Numerous complaints had been made, the councilman said, relative to the care of the animals at the pound.

Paul McCarthy Is Kiwanis Speaker

Attorney Paul McCarthy, one of the board of freeholders which has recently completed a proposed city charter which will be voted upon by the people of Redwood City on April 9, gave a comprehensive talk on the city government and its relation to the people of the community at the meeting of the Redwood City Kiwanis club Wednesday. McCarthy is recognized as an authority on municipal government and law, and Charles G. Lambert, by whom he was introduced, as the outstanding member of the board of freeholders. It was through his efforts that men familiar with municipal governments were obtained to confer with the board and that much valuable material was gathered together.

McCarthy explained the varous types of city governments in use in this country and also traced the history of these types of government, and explained the advantages and weak points of each one. His talk was most interesting, and coming at a time when the charter matter is one uppermost in the minds of most citizens of the city, it was most appropriate. The chairman of the meeting was Charles G. Lambert, who was also one of the board of freeholders.

Fire in Church Caught in Time To Save Building

A fire in the Congregational church on Webster street Sunday night did damage estimated at about $2,500, and for a while threatened to raze the whole of the structure. The fire was noticed about an hour after the church had been closed following the evening services. An alarm was turned in from box 16, and the fire department responded immediately.

It was found when entrance was gained to the building that the flames had not progressed far beyond the corner of the building where they had originated around a heating flue. The flames were found to have spread between the walls and quite a time was occupied in extinguishing them. The firemen were handicapped by the fact that the fire was close to the pipe organ and to several valuable stained glass windows, and every precaution was taken to save these. As it was, the organ was slightly damaged by the heat and water. The auditorium was badly blackened by smoke. The damage was not so great, however, as to necessitate abandonment of services, and church services will be held on Sunday as usual.

Boy Scout Fund Nears Mark Set

The campaign for funds for the Boy Scouts of this county was nearing an end today. Chairman Z. T. Thorning of the committee which has been making the campaign in Redwood City reported yesterday that more han $800 had been raised so far in this city. A committee of men were busy yesterday securing last minute donations to the Boy Scout cause.

Funds Still Short For School Paper

It is not definitely known as yet whether or not the Sequoia Times people will make the trip back east, but it is hoped that the remaining funds will be accumulated in the course of the next few days. The trip will have to be put off on account of lack of funds if the high school does not receive some last minute support.

Miss Schmidt, adviser of the Times, and Stanley Netherton, business manager, will be the ones to go, if the trip does materialize, and will travel via the Santa Fe railroad, journeying straight through to New York. Lodgings will be supplied at the headquarters of the convention, Columbia university, and the trip will probably take about 18 days all in all.

Because of the creditable standing made by the Times in the last few years of Californian contests, Miss Schmidt feels that the paper stands a very good chance of winning one of the many prizes awarded to each class entering the contest. Sequoia is entered under the title of Class B, or schools of from 800-1500, not withstanding the fact that Sequoia will be competing with schools having some five or six hundred more students, it is thought that the paper should make a name for the school and community.

Following is the list of contributors to the fund as it stands at present

City Council, $50; Exchange Club, $20; Native Sons, $10; D. W. Williams, $25; Mrs. Marie Jansing, $5; California Pacific Title Co., $5; Daniel Stafford, $5; Whitcomb & Smith $5; Mason Studios, $5; Musso Drug Co., $5; Buick Agency, $5; Hudson-Essex, $5; A. D. Walsh, $5; Norman Menifee, $5; C. L. Dimmitt, $5; Elizabeth Kneese, $5; Judge Buck, $5; Franklin Swart, $5; Boles Radio Den, $5; Thomas Nelson $5; E. W. Magruder, $5; Hearne Dry Goods Company, $5; C. M. Doxsee, $5; Peninsula Garage $2; George T. Rice Abstract Co., $5; Walter Realty Co., $5; Redwood Hardware Co., $5; Dr. Hatch, $3.50; Dr. O'Neill, $1; Dr. Peddicord, $2.50; Dr. R. C. Frazier, $5; Hull Hardware Co., $2.50; Downs Bike Shop, $2.50; Leach Furniture Co., $1; De Luxe Cleaner, $1; Towne Ford Agency, $5.

The school is, of course contributing considerable to the fund, but there is a large amount of cash needed before the trip can be undertaking. Contributors are asked to take their contributions to the First National Bank or the Bank of Italy of Redwood City.

New Auto Agency To Open in Town

In addition to Menlo Park, Carl Lindquist, will, starting immediately, merchandise Graham-Paige motor cars in Redwood City, according to an announcement by the Graham Paige Company of Northern California, direct factory branch in San Francisco and distrbutors for all of Northern California.

Linquist is receiving the congratulations of his many friends on his new appointment and he feels quite certain that the Graham-Paige line will prove a real winner with residents of Redwood City this year.

"The new Graham-Paige cars are the finest yet produced by the three Graham brothers," said Lindquist on his return from the San Francisco Factory branch yesterday. "The thousands of people who have seen these new cars are high in their praise over the many improvements that have been made since the first Graham-Paige car rolled off the line at the factory just a little over a year ago.

High School Notes

The last P. A. L. basketball game for Sequoia nearly ended in a riot Friday night, when the Cherokee Thirties played the South City Hoopsters on the Northerners' court. The Windy City players refused to play when the 'Indians' attempted to make use of the "Stall" in the last of the game in order to break up a mass defense organized by the Northerners, and when the Redwood City boys were leaving the pavilion later, a barrage of bricks, stones, and whatnot followed them off. A dent in a fender of Coach Frank Griffin's new Ford and several small bruises were all the injuries sustained by the Cherokees.

Methodists Will Present Play

Members of the Ladies Aid of the Methodist church will present a three-act comedy, "The Old Peabody Pew," next Friday night in the church at the corner of Broadway and Brewster street.

This play is a dramatization by Kate Douglas Wiggins of her own story by the same name. The setting is about the year 1870 in the town of Edgewood, situated in the Tory Hills of New England. It is a story of a band of faithful workers, who have contrived by careful planning and much labor to keep the "meetin' house" in a fair state of preservation and are now preparing to carpet the "dear old church."

The love affair hinted at in the first act as having begun some years before is finished during the play. It is an imaginary one of the parting of two undeclared lovers, and their subsequent reunion in the place where their friendship had blossomed into love.

The carpet committee of the Edgewood Dorcas Society is as follows: Mrs. Burbank, president of the Dorcas Society, Mrs. Kinkead; Mrs. Baxter, the minister's wife, Mrs. Winning; Mrs. Miller, wife of Deacon Miller, the sexton, Mrs. A. A. Arends; Mrs. Sargent, the village historian, Mrs. Gerard; The Widow Buzzell, willing to take a second chance, Mrs. Carl Fisher; Miss Lobella Brewster, no lover of men, Mrs. Glenn Alexander; Miss Maria Sharp, quick of speech but sound of heart, Mrs. Jack Strand; Miss Nancy Wentworth, who has waited ten years for her romance, Mrs. Donald Boge; Justin Peabody, sole living claimant of the old Peabody pew, Albert Davies. Deacon Miller, Mr. Burbank, Mr. Brewster and other men of the congregation will furnish the music.

The play is being given under the direction of Mrs. Bess Balcomb and the public may be assured that the most will be made of the comic situations created by the author. Admission to the play will be fifty cents for adults and twenty-five cents for children.

Second of Series Readings Will Be Given Here

The second of a series of four dramatic readings will be given next Tuesday in the Little Theatre at the Sequoia Union High School by Mrs. Hugh Brown of Palo Alto. Mrs. Brown is well-known to Redwood City audiences and her readings are always looked forward to with interest by those who have heard her.

Mrs. Brown's reading on Tuesday will be "The Letter," a mystery story similiar in some respects to "The Trial of Mary Dugan," which created considerable interest in San Francisco recently. Other readings of the series will be given by Mrs. Brown on Monday, March 11, and on Tuesday, March 26. Admission to these readings is 75 cents for one or $2.00 for the series.

NO HOPE NOW FOR AID IN DREDGING

Council Told That Four Years Must Elapse

There is no hope of governmental aid in the dredging of the San Bruno shoals this year, but the project may be considered by the board of engineers of the war department next February. This was the information contained in a letter to the city council from Congressman A. M. Free.

Councilman D. R. Stafford, to whom the letter was addressed, read the message to the city board Monday evening. Congressman Free stated that the matter of dredging the shoals off San Bruno point, and opening up the southern part of the bay to deep draft vessels had been considered by the war department in February 1926. At that time, he stated, the project had received a negative recommendation, as it was the opinion of the engineers that the development would be of benefit only to those owning waterfront land on the southern bay, and was not of general benefit. Congressman Free, however, seemed confident that the project would receive the support of the engineering board if it could be shown that the dredging of the shoals at this point would open the bay shore to industrial development.

The letter was filed, and the matter will be taken up again by the city council next year. The delay is necessitated by the rule of the war department that a project that has been rejected cannot be again placed before the board of engineers for consideration for four years, and as the plan was rejected in 1926, it cannot again be submitted until February 1930.

Bride-To Be Is Honored Guest

The home of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Heiner on El Camino Real was the scene of a pretty party last Saturday given in honor of Miss Christine Graves, who is to become the bride of J. R. Hedge in June. Those invited were:

Mrs. Cecelia C. Graves, Mrs. James D. Hedge, Mrs. A. W. Gentry, Paso Robles; Mrs. Kenneth Shipp, Berkeley; Mrs. James Stewart, Palo Alto; Mrs. Lorenz Otzen, Mrs. James O'Dell and Mrs. Brian Pagen; and the Misses Christine Graves, Katherine Belcher, Marie O'Connell, Claire Foley, Margaret Kalenborn, Dorothy Chilcott, Dorothy Beebe, Palo Alto; Dorothy, Dolores and Helen Lyons, Eleanor Hynding, South San Francisco; Frances Gunther, Sevigne Roussel, Antinette Dompe, Charlotte Lunt, Audine Martin, Florence Johnson, Belmont; Eleanor Ray, Sue Curtis, Julia Piutec and Katherine and Janet Webber, Palo Alto.

The annual ball of Redwood City Post American Legion will take place tomorrow evening in the Foresters' hall. The dance has caused considerable attention in town, and more than eleven hundred tickets have been sold.

George Washington's Life

Was a Romance of Preparation

HIS self-education and early trials gave him the confidence and resourcefulness that made him a good surveyor. As surveyor the hardships and dangers of the wilderness prepared him for service in the French and Indian War. The experiences of this war helped to fit him for the tremendous responsibilities that were his during the Revolutionary War. Political and military experiences of the Revolution prepared him for his exacting duties as the First President.

Preparation counts for much in every life, and a growing reserve fund provides one of the best preparations. Your fund, if deposited here, is safely guarded and earns interest—two good aids in the preparation for financial success.

POULTRY

MOLASSES HAS EDGE ON CORN

Good Results at Ohio Station Have Been Obtained.

Cane molasses in the poultry ration possesses certain distinct advantages over corn, when substituted for that grain in quantities up to 10 per cent of the ration. This has been established by two years of experimental work by the poultry husbandry department of the Ohio State university. The molasses has replaced corn on a pound-for-pound basis. "It has given equally good results in rations for starting and growing chickens, laying hens and fattening birds," says Prof. A. R. Winter of the poultry department, in discussing the results of the tests.

In a test with laying hens, those fed on a ration containing 5 per cent of molasses laid 16.93 per cent more eggs than a group fed with corn and no molasses. At the same time the mortality among them was only 5 per cent as compared to 12.5 per cent among the hens which got no molasses. The test was carried on during the fall and winter months.

Growing chicks, at eight weeks of age, weighed 17.7 per cent more when fed a 5 per cent molasses ration, and suffered a mortality of only 7.32 per cent as against 12.39 per cent for the chicks which received corn instead of molasses. When fed 10 per cent molasses the chicks weighed only 16.5 per cent more, but the mortality had been reduced to 4.88 per cent.

"The cane molasses carries some vitamine B and furnishes carbohydrates in easily available form," says Professor Winter. "The potassium salts in the product serve as a mild laxative. It is believed that the carbohydrates create a condition in the intestine unfavorable to the development of coccidiosis and other harmful bacteria. This theory is under investigation at the present time."

Milk Solids Favored for All Kinds of Fowl

Skim milk solids are fundamental in the poultry rations recommended by Massachusetts Agricultural college in Extension Leaflet, No. 6. Laying mash formula is: 100 pounds bran, 100 pounds middlings, 200 pounds yellow corn meal, 100 pounds ground oats, 50 pounds meat scrap, 25 pounds "powdered milk," 25 pounds alfalfa leaf meal, 5 pounds fine salt, 25 pounds steamed bone meal; and the grain formula is 100 pounds each of cracked corn, whole corn, wheat, or barley and oats. In addition the leaflet recommends: "Feed skim milk whenever available . . . When all the skim milk the bird will consume is available, meat scrap need not be fed." For chicks, the laying mash with an additional 25 pounds of dry skim milk is recommended, together with chick grain, 200 pounds fine cracked corn, and 100 pounds cracked wheat. Milk solids in the laying mash amount to 4 per cent; in the chick mash to 8 per cent.

Sprouted Oats Needed by the Laying Hens

"Sprouted oats for laying hens," is a formula that should be in every poultryman's feeding guide, says G. L. Stevenson, of the South Dakota State college. It's not very expensive either. However, it does require a warm room or basement.

Equipment needed for sprouting oats may be homemade. The boxes should be shallow, not over three or four inches deep. In preparing the oats for sprouting, it should be soaked overnight in a bucket or tub. A few drops of formaldehyde added to the water in which the oats is soaked will prevent mold from developing. Moldy grain is often fatal to poultry.

After the oats has been soaked and drained it may be spread out in the boxes and kept in a warm room or in a heated sprouting device. In a few days when the oats sprouts have attained a length of two or three inches, they will be ready for feeding.

Broody Hen Care

When several broody hens are sitting in coops close against one another, it may save much potential trouble if each bird is tethered by a long, thin cord from one leg to her nest-box. This will insure that, after her spell off duty, she joins her own nest and not a neighbor's, as she is otherwise liable to do. A hen may settle down for a short time on a strange nest, but soon she finds out her mistake, jumps up, and so allows the eggs to be chilled.

Use for Vitamine D

Vitamine D, which is found in cod liver oil, is useful in helping to properly assimilate minerals. This vitamine is furnished by the direct rays of sunshine. During winter months, sunshine does not contain as many of these helpful rays as in summer. When sunshine passes through ordinary glass a great deal of the helpful influence is lost. These two factors make it possible to utilize cod liver oil to advantage in winter rations for laying hens.

Feed Cod Liver Oil

When glass substitutes are used on hen houses and when the south windows are thrown open so that the direct rays of the sun may enter the houses during the warm part of the day, there is less need for cod liver oil in the ration. However, a large number of hatchery operators are specifying that flock owners must feed their hens some cod liver oil. They have found from experience that it is good insurance in the production of livable chicks.

Papers of Washington Family Found

A newly discovered trunk, close to two centuries old, that had belonged to George Washington's only sister, Betty, containing upward of 2,000 original papers of Washington's family and contemporaries, was taken to Washington from Fredericksburg, Va., by Henry Woodhouse, president of the Aerial League of America. Inspecting the papers, in the photograph are, left to right: William Tyler Page, clerk of the house of representatives and executive secretary of the United States commission for the celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of George Washington's birth; William Selden Washington, descendant of George Washington's brother, and Henry Woodhouse.

To Limit Peers

London.—The house of lords is demanding a reform which would limit its membership and provide for certain peers to be elected.

It seems likely that the country will eventually adopt some sort of plan like this, since it is widely asserted that the present constitution of the British upper house renders it not only impotent but inefficient. There are many who would like to see it on a par with the United States senate. Others would like to see it abolished altogether.

This situation is recognized by the house of lords itself. The latest move was to vote by 52 to 8 that "it is desirable that early steps should be taken to limit the number of members of the house of lords and to make provision for an elective representative or nomination as would insure to each political party a fair position in the house of lords."

Theoretically, parliament is divided in three parts, the king, the house of commons and the house of lords and the assent of each component is required before an act of parliament can become a law, with certain exceptions. Actually, the house of commons makes the laws, because the king supports its decisions and the commons control the lords with the threat of creating any number of peers needed to pass a bill through the house of lords should the upper house prove recalcitrant.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Why Numbness Kills Feeling

Feeling depends upon nerves and nerve action depends on temperature. When a finger or any portion of the body is made cold and numb the nerves in that center are immune from feeling because they do not receive impressions at the nerve-ends on the skin. This is why, for very minor operations, the freezing process is used.

Proof of Scotch Thrift Found in Bankbooks

Glasgow, Scotland.—Scottish thrift is not fiction.

One of every three of the population has a bankbook, and savings for 1928 constitute a record, says the annual report of the Glasgow Savings bank.

The amount due depositors is $120,000,000, an increase of $4,900,000 over last year, while 40,000 "homesafes"—small cash boxes—are in use.

The number of depositors, the volume of business transacted, the balance at depositors' credit and the banks' reserve each constitute a record.

World's Biggest Tooth Is 50,000 Years Old

Boston, Mass.—The largest tooth in the world, measuring 11 feet 2 inches in length and weighing more than 300 pounds, has just arrived at the Harvard Dental school museum. It came from the jaw of a mastadon, and scientists estimate that is more than 50,000 years old. The tusk was found embedded in the bank of the Porcupine river, a tributary of the Yukon, in Alaska.

Hunt Prehistoric Man

Denver, Colo.—Scientists are digging into the earth in many sections of the western plains country, seeking more light on fairly well established contentions that prehistoric man existed in America millions of years ago.

The work being done contradicts to a great extent the common belief that the life of man in America did not approach the antiquity found in Europe.

Harold J. Cook, honorary curator of paleontology at the Colorado museum of natural history, gave a synopsis of recent scientific achievements in this region when he addressed the Colorado-Wyoming academy of sciences at Denver university.

"During the Pleistocene age we have ample evidence that various races of bison invaded America from Asia," he said. "In fact, Asia is now generally admitted to have been the center of development and dispersal of mammalian life throughout tertiary times.

"Now, with all these things in mind, is it not logical to believe that early man, developing under such conditions, could migrate into America quite as well as the game he hunted, at any time they could get there?"

Following out this line of thought, Doctor Cook told of recent discoveries tending to substantiate the theory. At the town of Colorado, in southwest Texas, were found skeletons of a new type of extinct, flat horned bison, and remains of two races of elephant, a large camel, various extinct horses and other typically Pleistocene mammals.

"In taking out an articulated skeleton of one of these flat horned bison," Cook said, "representatives of the Colorado museum found three arrow heads definitely associated in the matrix with it and under conditions that preclude the possibility of error. They were undoubtedly shot into that very buffalo."

At about the same time fossil remains of a large extinct bison were found near Folsom, N. M.

"The American museum, New York, was invited to participate in the work this last summer," said Cook, "and did so. Here, associated with the bison, sixteen flint points were found of an absolutely new type and of the finest grade of workmanship known in flaked stone.

"Fortunately, four of these were exposed undisturbed in position where found during the course of these excavations. There is no question of definite association here of these flint points with a race of extinct bison."

Bandit Returns Funds

Acapulco, Mexico.—J. Calderon, a famous local rebel chief, has earned for himself a reputation for scrupulous honesty. He invariably returns money obtained from public offices in the towns he raids. He considers such money "borrowed" for the cause.

How to Finance It

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

If it is determined that the boy should go to college and if he has made up his mind what subjects he is going to study, there yet remains other problems. How shall his education be paid for? This is in many cases a costly problem. As the cost of living has increased, college tuition, excepting in rare instances, has increased proportionately, and tuition and board and lodging and general expenses for the thousand and one things which one has to have in order that he may live, must be met.

Possibly a third of all the men who go to college attempt to earn a part or all of their expenses. As I have said many times, if it must be done, well and good, but it is a mistake to attempt to unless it is absolutely necessary. The best and the poorest students try to earn their living in college. The poorest fail and the best seem to do it without difficulty.

If one has skill of any particular sort he should utilize it; if he has not he should be content with earning his board. Not many men can safely do more. Whatever other amount is necessary to provide a decent living should be arranged for before the student enters college. He should stay out of high school until he has saved enough to give him a dependable start in college or he should be assured of a regular monthly income from home.

It is seldom safe to depend upon what chance friends say they will do for one. Most colleges have loan funds or scholarships available for upper classmen, and these the self-supporting student should investigate.

The boy who depends upon an allowance from home to finance him through college is lucky, for he is free in such a case to use his time to the best possible advantage. The allowance from home should be definite, it should be regular and it should be adequate to cover all his necessary expenses.

One of the most sensible and one of the wealthiest women I have known said of her three sons whom I knew in college:

"We did not want our boys to live better than their friends. We gave them only what boys whose parents in moderate circumstances could afford. We wanted them to live comfortably but not extravagantly."

She had the right idea. She discovered what the average student found necessary and taught her boys to live within this amount. It is a mistake to have too much money in college just as it is a serious handicap to have too little, but whatever the student has from home should come upon a definite day of the month, and should go into a checking account of his own. One of the best things a student can learn when he goes away from home to college is how intelligently to manage a bank account, and how to live within a specific regular income. In finding out what is necessary it is wisest to ask the dean rather than a sophomore.

Documents Prove Origin of Vatican Art Works

London.—A small but valuable collection of manuscripts relating to work done by eminent Italian artists for the Vatican is to be found in Soho, the foreign restaurant quarter of London. They are the property of Barberi, the padrone of the Taverna Medicea.

So precious are these manuscripts that Barberi exhibits them rarely. They bear the signatures of such illustrious artists as Bramente, Donatello, Mantegna, Raphael and Pietro della Francesca. All were acquired by their owner in London during the World war.

The most important was written by Michaelangelo in Italian. It is his agreement to erect the tomb of Pope Julius II in St. Peter's, and is dated 1513.

Subs for Dad

New York.—Seymour Agaid, ten years old, appeared in Traffic court for his sick father. So good was his plea that sentence was suspended.

Our First Millionaire

New York.—The first American millionaire was George Washington, according to Eugene E. Prussing, Los Angeles lawyer, formerly of Chicago, who has just completed thirteen years of research into Washington's career as a business man. Summing up the results of his study in the American Magazine, Mr. Prussing says:

"It is customary to think of Washington as soldier and statesman. He was also a man of business, successful farmer, builder of transportation engineer, pioneer and promoter. He was a man of broad commercial vision and rare business ability. He spent one-fourth of his life in public service and yet left behind him a record of business achievement and a fortune that entitles him to be called our first millionaire. He started life with but a few cents of his own. When he died the land and other investments that he directed to be sold were worth, by his own conservative estimate in his will, $530,000, and this did not include some of the most valuable portions of his estate.

"To many of us Washington is a mythical figure, hidden behind fables like that of the self-righteous little boy and the hypothetical cherry tree. As a matter of fact, he was a very different sort of person. He was a man who would have been perfectly at ease in a group of modern big business men around the directors' table. And he enjoyed fox hunting and dancing, as the modern man enjoys golf.

"In his ideals, his sense for giving value as well as getting it, his insistence on exact statistics, his zeal for big constructive undertakings, for striking into virgin fields, seizing opportunities, opening avenues to development, his instinctive sizing-up of the possibilities of profit in a deal—in all these matters and others like them, his attitude was strikingly similar to that of the best of modern business. He did not definitely formulate any rules for moneymaking, but he followed certain basic principles throughout his career."

Washington's apprenticeship in business started soon after his father's death, which occurred when the boy was twelve.

"From that time," Mr. Prussing says, "he was pretty much on his own and was always faced with the problem of making a living.

"Washington's first job was as an apprentice surveyor with G. W. Fairfax. At seventeen he became official surveyor of Culpepper county, and began his life work as an engineer. He had the thrifty idea of not taking all his pay in cash. He knew where the best acres were located, and, believing that land prices would rise, he began putting his extra pay into good land.

"His returns on farming later averaged as high as $15,000 a year. He ran a gristmill at Mount Vernon. He conducted fisheries on ten miles of waterfront, shipping his product to England and the West Indies. He maintained a ferry across the Potomac, which paid a handsome profit. He devoted six years as managing director of a company which was engaged in drainage and lumbering operations in Virginia, and he was president of the Potomac River company, a navigation and development enterprise which eventually evolved into the Chesapeake & Ohio and the Baltimore & Ohio railroad systems. He purchased 53,000 acres of land in Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia.

"Washington ran his business affairs by exact knowledge. He always knew where he stood. He kept complete records of receipts and expenditures and of all business transactions."

Wife Loses Her Ring, Hubby Finds It in Pie

Mill City, Ore.—L. G. Foster claims the distinction of having had one of the most valuable pieces of lemon pie in history.

When he attacked a generous piece of the pie, Foster discovered an expensive diamond ring.

He was jubilant until his wife exclaimed, "That's mine!"

Mrs. Foster had removed the ring and placed it on a window ledge just above the table where she made the pie. When she finished her work, she searched for the ring, without success.

Foster found it—with his teeth.

Old Trolley Cars as Resort Cottages

Benton Harbor, Mich.—J. J. Bachunas, proprietor of the Tabor resort, a romantic spot on the St. Joseph river six miles east of here, announces that he has purchased old interurban cars and expects to convert them into summer cottages.

At least six of the huge interurbans have been in service twenty years on the run from Benton Harbor to Eau Claire, Indian Lake and Dowagiac.

Mississippi Boy of 10 Wears Size 25 Shoes

Racine, Wis.—A pair of size 25 shoes has just been made for a ten-year-old schoolboy by a Racine shoe manufacturing company. The purchaser is Robert Wadlow, an elementary school student of Alton, Miss. The boy is 6 feet 10 inches tall and weighs 250 pounds.

Five square feet of leather were used to manufacture the shoes.

Physicians say that if the boy continues to grow he will be nine feet tall when he reaches maturity.

Counting Indians

Miss Rachel Jenss of the office of Indian affairs of the Department of Interior has gone to Arizona where she will make a census of the Papago and Pima Indian tribes having reservations in that state. Miss Jenss recently completed a census of the largest of American Indian tribes, the Navajos, residing chiefly in northern Arizona.

Girl at the Top in Health Test

Millions of boys and girls all over the world, thousands of them right here in the West are being restored to health and strength by the purely vegetable tonic and laxative known as California Fig Syrup and endorsed by physicians for over 50 years.

Children need no urging to take it. They love its rich, fruity flavor. Nothing can compete with it as a gentle, but certain laxative, and it goes further than this. It gives tone and strength to the stomach and bowels so these organs continue to act normally, of their own accord. It stimulates the appetite, helps digestion.

A Kansas mother, Mrs. Dana Allgire, 610 Monroe St., Topeka, says: "Bonnie B. is absolutely the picture of health, now, with her ruddy cheeks, bright eyes and plump but graceful little body and she stands at the top in every health test.

Much of the credit for her perfect condition is due to California Fig Syrup. We have used it since babyhood to keep her bowels active during colds or any children's ailments and she has always had an easy time with them. She always responds to its gentle urging and is quickly back to normal."

Ask your druggist for California Fig Syrup and look for the word "California" on the carton so you'll always get the genuine.

"No, the malady is gardenitis. She received a new seed catalogue today," was the distressed husband's lament.

Common Sense or Cruiser Craziness?

VARYING viewpoints as to present world affairs prevail among our poets and philosophers.

"The wondrous, wondrous age" of radios and airplanes inspires one class with hope. "A mad, mad, world, my masters" is the despairing wail of another, smitten by fear.

Both find ample justification in the recent contradictory actions of our leaders in international politics. With one consent Europe and America sign the permanent outlawry of War. Simultaneously proceed other mandates for the expenditure of millions of money for more and ever more, armed cruisers.

The man in the street finds difficulty in reconciling this contradictory behavior of statesmen. Here are, for example, two great nations, easily among the most advanced in the world, speaking the same language, both professing the Christian religion, born of the same kin, commercially interdependent, neighbors with an undefended frontier of 3000 miles, each led to believe that necessity compels them promptly to arm against each other.

Exactly why, no one appears to know. Ostensibly an unsettled squabble of a century as to the "Freedom of the Seas" in time of War. But today, for countless reasons, Britain's old song, "Rule Britannia!" is obsolete. Most certainly the idea is preposterous that a nation of forty millions should lay down regulations adverse to the interests of a nation three times as populous and resourceful.

Furthermore, it should certainly be in the range of possibilities, as the chairman of our Naval Affairs Congressional Committee suggests, to have a number of representative men of each nation foregather and discuss the present status from a common sense, business point of view; and NOT from that of America's "Big Navy" men and British Admirals. This is the more imperative because Fear now demands that each must be prepared to fight, not only the navy of a single nation, but a possible combination of many. Can none of the world's statesmen suggest some saner solution? Can't we in this 20th century demand to be ruled by common sense rather than by this cruiser craziness?

—EDWARD BERWICK
Pacific Grove, California.

Wings—the Supreme Achievement of Man

THE Progress of Man is limited only by his imagination. What his mind conceives, his hand achieves. Long bludgeoned by the forces of nature surrounding him, he has learned to match brain against brawn. One by one, his enemies have become his servants. Even the earth shrinks until he spins it in the palm of his hand.

In his lust of time and space, in his craving for greater dominion, he has smashed every intervening barrier, until he is within reach of the ultimate. Now the pulsing forces of Nature accept his bridle, and the mere pressure of his figer tip can shatter the mountains that prison Titans. Yet the source of his power is knowledge, not muscle.

Faith has ever been his torch, and Fact his sabre in the interminable conflict of the ages.

The latest of his victories is the realization of his greatest dream. Lord and master of land and sea, he has added the third dimension of air. His wings have conquered the vast and vague empire of the sky making him more conscious of the divinity that is coursing through his veins.

The greater the height of Man's perspective, the larger grows his concept of the universal.

In the brief space of twenty-five years, since he first felt the lift of his pinions, Man has learned to fly higher than the condor and swifter than the swallow. The mime surpasses those whom he imitates.

The urge of trade and travel has ever spurred Man's ingenuity into devising and improving his means of communication. And now commerce accepts the heavier-than-air-machine, the most facile and flexible of all agencies of transportation, into the great trimvirate of keel and wheel and wing.

—J. P. MULLER in the Exchangite

Fear—Man's Worst Enemy

ONE of the most insidious and deadly enemies that confront mankind today is Fear. Nor is it a new condition, for since the beginning of time this cowardly foeman has attached itself with barnacle-like tenacity to many of the human race. In other cases it is content to lurk in the darkness, shoot its poisoned arrows from well concealed vantage points, and unfortunately the aim is generally unerring.

Few men there are who have not fallen victim at some time or other to this peculiar condition. Fear is seemingly a baffling subject, and should one attempt to define it accurately he most likely would be faced with myriad forms which coordinate perfectly with the parent subject—a massed battalion of component features, some great, others minute.

It has been averred that Fear may properly be said to arise, in part at least, from a state of ignorance. Again, apprehension or speculation may be said to induce Fear. Whatever its cause, this sinister element has perhaps been responsible for more cases of suicide than any other reason—fear of invalidism, failing sight, loss of position, poverty, the exactions of law, etc.

Medical practitioners will agree that modern therapy recognizes Fear as a serious condition which must be overcome in the treatment of certain diseases. Psychologists will not deny the baneful influence Fear exercises upon the human mind.

Years ago if a forward-looking scientist were to make the statement that Fear induces epidemics in a far greater sense than actual contact with a person suffering with a contagious disease, he would in most likelihood be scoffed at for entertaining this theory. And yet the wireless, which has by no means reached its highest point of perfection; the radio, still in a state of experimentation, and other related agencies have opened people's eyes to the fact that the very air we breathe is filled with sounds of all kinds which may be reproduced by the proper devices. Is it not then reasonable to suppose that this same air is surcharged with thoughts, beneficial and harmful, constructive and destructive, good and evil, healthy and ill, which surely must have some influence upon the human mind and are reproduced accordingly?

Milton truthfully said, "The good the more communicated, the more abundant grows." And when people learn to exercise care about their thinking, refusing to be influenced by Fear, they will be happier and healthier. However, epidemics will continue to take their toll of human life so long as Fear plays its stellar role.

Job, according to Holy Writ, admitted with some bitterness that the thing he greatly feared had come upon him. Elsewhere in the Sacred Volume is to be found, "I will fear no evil for Thou art with me," which beautiful and consoling thought is confirmed by that brief but divinely potent phrase, "Perfect Love casteth out Fear."

Taxation Needs Study

THE Chamber of Commerce of the United States, by attempting to develop a national consciousness of the influence of taxes upon progress and prosperity, and to promote a wiser spending of public funds, is carrying on an activity of the first importance.

A short time ago the Chamber issued a pamphlet on the subject of indebtedness incurred by municipalities, advocating that, whenever possible, the "pay-as-you-go" plan be adopted. Future surveys are planned on equally outstanding similar phases.

The Chamber is making no effort to influence communities to refrain from spending money at the expense of progress. It is attempting to expedite civic progress, that the maximum of constructive result may be had from every dollar of tax money.

There is too little popular understanding of the modern tax situation. Activities of such organizations as the U. S. Chamber of Commerce are hopeful signs toward bettering our present tax condition.

PROPER EDUCATION

Education does not mean teaching people what they do not know. It means teaching them to behave as they do not behave. It is not teaching the youth the shapes of the letters and the tricks of numbers, and then leaving them to turn their arithmetic to roguery, and their literature to lust. It means, on the contrary, training them into the perfect exercise and kingly continence of their bodies and souls. It is a painful, continual and difficult work to be done by kindness, by watching, by warning, by precept, and by praise, but above all—by example—John Ruskin.

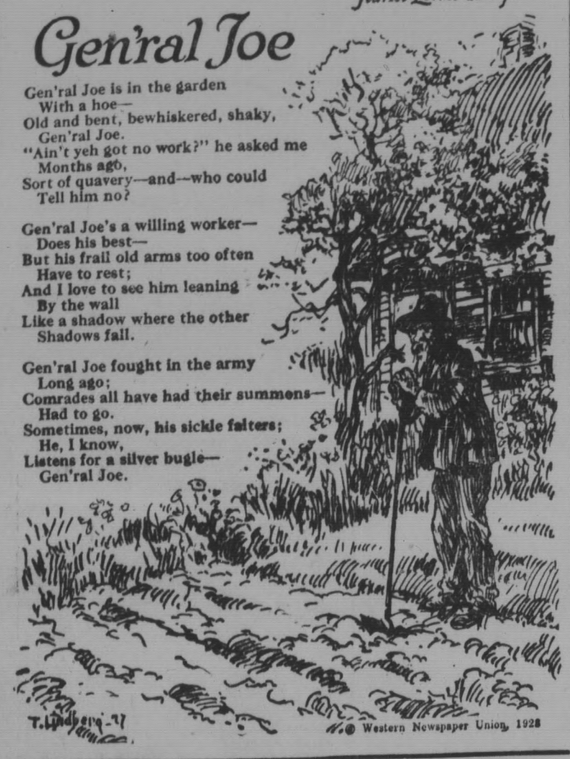
Of course, getting an education has its values, but one of the reasons why a boy should not drop out before entering high school is that it is too early an age for a boy to get the habit of quitting—Fort Worth Record.

Here is a law that never varies: No man is bigger than those he hates. When you outgrow them you stop hating them—Duluth Herald.

Songs of Plain Folks

By James Lewis Hays

Gen'ral Joe



Gen'ral Joe is in the garden
With a hoe—
Old and bent, bewhiskered, shaky,
Gen'ral Joe.
"Ain't yeh got no work?" he asked me
Months ago,
Sort of quavery—and—who could
Tell him no?

Gen'ral Joe's a willing worker—
Does his best—
But his frail old arms too often
Have to rest;
And I love to see him leaning
By the wall
Like a shadow where the other
Shadows fall.

Gen'ral Joe fought in the army
Long ago;
Comrades all have had their summons—
Had to go.
Sometimes, now, his sickle falters;
He, I know,
Listens for a silver bugle—
Gen'ral Joe.

STATE LEADS IN MINERALS IN YEAR 1928

$1,863,838 Produced In San Mateo County

SACRAMENTO, Feb. 20, (CNB)—Eclipsing its own record-breaking gold production for the past three decades, California in one year has poured out $450,330,856 of her inexhaustible mineral wealth, Walter W. Bradley, state mineralogist, disclosed today.

San Mateo county's minerals contributed $1,863,838 to her wealth in the year, Bradley announced, with stone furnishing $129,802, and the balance distributed over other minerals, including cement, limestone natural gas, petroleum and salt.

"All that glistens is not gold," the state mineralogist's yearly record, discloses, but with few exceptions, the 58 mineral substances mined commercially in the 58 counties paid handsome profits to the state's modern argonauts.

Petroleum production dropped off $84,811,179, so far as value is concerned, although production gained from 224,637,281 to 231,195, 774 barrels. This decline in the worth of "black gold" was responsible in a large measure for a drop of $83,549,462 in the value of the state's mineral output, exclusive of precious stones. In most instances, however, with the exception of oil, copper, lead and zinc, which slumped as the result of market declines, California mineral output gained in value.

The state, second only to Pennsylvania for mineral wealth, continues to lead as a domestic source of borax, chromite and magnesite, gold, quicksilver and platinum, and alternates with Colorado for the tungsten crown and with Oklahoma for first place in output of petroleum.

Gold production in the state has declined over a period of a number of years, and probably will continue to do so, Bradley's report reveals. The value of the yellow metal mined in the year fell off approximately $300,000 to $11,671,018.

Firemen Pension Plans Meeting With Difficulties

SACRAMENTO, Feb. 20, (CNB)—Hopes that Redwood City or other municipal or district fire departments may have of state aid in financing pension plans were a bit in the air today as proponents of legislative proposals to make such help possible prepared to change course in mid-channel.

Question of constitutionality of the plan involving allotment by the state of one-half of taxes paid by insurance companies as sponsored by Senator George W. Rochester of Los Angeles was under discussion today, with probability being that the clause in the constitution prohibiting the state from making gifts to cities or counties will have to be changed before the plan becomes operative.

Probable confliction with the constitution on this score was pointed out by Director of Finance, A. R. Heron. It is also declared unofficially that the Rochester plan is not in accord with the California Tax Commission's program.

The present state insurance tax is 2.6 percent. of gross premiums on business done within the state. Rochester would reduce this tax to 1.5 percent. and allocate half of it to the use of city or district fire department pension funds.

Plans to finance these funds by addition of a two percent. tax to the present rate of 2.6 died aborning last year when an initiative proposal intended for the general election ballot was withdrawn. This was done after it was discovered that the plan would result in a retaliatory tax against companies doing business in other states.

Miss Annie Tighe arrived in this city from Ireland Monday and will remain for some months as the guest of her sister, Mrs. James Hardgrove.

The top of the belfry of the town hall blew off during a recent storm and presents a very dilapidated appearance.

Miss Gertrude Beeger was out this week for the first time since her long illness with typhoid fever.

The large oak doors are being put in place at the new high school and the building will be in its completed state in a very short time. Contractor MacBain is to be congratulated on the appearance of the structure which is easily one of the finest in the state.

Alvinza Hayward, the pioneer mine owner, who has long been one of San Mateo county's most unique characters, passed away after a short illness Monday and was buried Thursday by the Grand Lodge of Masons. He was a native of New York and was 83 years old. Mr. Hayward leaves a wife and daughter.

The Wolfe and Lyon families have secured the McNally cottage for the summer and will move down the latter part of March.

Redwood Council Offers Prize For Best Essay

Want $25? Just write an essay on what benefits the proposed municipal harbor will bring to Redwood City, and you may be given a check by the city council.

In order to better acquaint the people of Redwood City with the benefits which the proposed harbor development will bring to this city, the city council Monday night offered three prizes for the three best essays submitted. The first prize will be $25, the second will be $15 and the third $10.

The sugegstion was made by Councilman D. R. Stafford, who offered to put up prizes of $15, $10, and $5 himself in order to create interest in the project. After some discussion, it was agreed by the council on a motion of Councilman Thorning, that the city would put up the prizes and the three amounts were agreed upon.

The only requirements for entry to the contest are that the contestant must be a resident of Redwood City, or be attending one of the Redwood City schools. The essays must not contain more than 500 words and must be typewritten on a good quality of paper on sheets 8½ by 11 inches in size. The essays must be submitted to the board by the 18th of March. A committee of judges will be appointed later by the city council.

Henry Reghetti of this city left on Wednesday for his old home in Switzerland, where he will visit for several weeks. Reghetti, who is a special agent of the Standard Oil Co. at Halfmoon Bay, has taken a year's leave of absence from his position.

California will have 14 separate primeval forest areas consisting of 1,500,000 acres.

New Lodge Will Start Tomorrow In Palo Alto

Tomorrow evening, February 23, has been set as the date for the institution of a lodge of the Order of Sons of St. George at Palo Alto. The order is a fraternal organization composed of Englishmen and men of immediate English ancestry. The Palo Alto lodge has been called Lincoln Lodge, and it will form a connecting link between Trafalgar lodge at San Mateo and Victory Lodge at San Jose. Many residents of Redwood City and this vicinity are to be charter members of the new lodge, and George Wheeler of this city will be its first president.

The lodge will be instituted by Grand President E. T. Vinckery and his staff of officers of the Grand Lodge. The candidates will be initiated by the degree team of Trafalgar Lodge of San Mateo in the brown room of the Masonic temple.

The public is invited to the blue room of the temple, where fine entertainment will be provided during the initiation of the new members. Later the members of the new lodge will go to the blue room, where the new officers will be installed by the drill team of Albion Lodge.

Lincoln Lodge is to meet the first and third Wednesday of each month in the brown room of the Palo Alto Masonic temple.

The objects of the order are:

First: To clearly set forth the American origin, and the American spirit and purposes of the Order.

Second: To extol the dignity of American citizenship and to emphasize the privilege and high duty of its acquirement upon everyone coming to our shores from across the seas.

Third: To extend the helping hand of fellowship, to assist in obtaining employment, to surround with the right kind of social atmosphere and to do every possible thing to help make our newly arriving brothers of kin to love America and make the United States his permanent home.

Fourth: To insist upon an unhyphenated, one hundred percent Americanism for all citizens regardless of tongue, creed, color or race extraction.

Fifth: To combat insidious or other propaganda that tends to embroil America in the domestic affairs of any one of our sister nations.

Sixth: While jealously guarding the political independence of our own United States of America, to cultivate the closest friendship and to do whatever lies within our power calculated to strengthen the bonds of brotherhood between the two great families of the Anglo-Sexon race in England and America.

Seventh: To dignify toil, to encourage thrift, to insist upon scrupulous observance of law and to respect the established conventions of society.

Eighth: To relieve the distressed, to visit the sick, to comfort the dying, to bury the dead, to care for the widow and orphan, and to defend the rights and protect the good name of every worthy Son of St. George.

Redwood Woman Will Appear In 3-Act Comedy

The fact that Mrs. L. W. Malloy, resident of Redwood City and a student in the night dramatic class at the Sequoia high school, has been assigned an important role in the splendid three-act comedy, "The Cleanup," which is to be produced in San Mateo at the Junior College theatre, February 27 and 28, by the Granada Players, should attract considerable attention from playgoers of this city.

Mrs. Malloy's talents were recognized quickly by Thomas Idwin, director of Granada Players productions, and she was given the difficult role of Mrs. Lucretia Aswell, member of the nominating committee for the Women's Political Party. The dramatic requirements in the part of Mrs. Aswell are of such a type that only a more advanced amateur could possibly hope to handle the role satisfactorily. She must run the range of emotion, including affability, anger, surprise and haughtiness.

"The Cleanup" is a new play, fresh from a successful season in New York and is being released for the first time to semi-professional companies. The plot deals with politics as seen from a woman's point of view. It involves the happiness of a newly married couple and brings about many dramatic as well as humorous situations.

The Granada Players introduced themselves to the peninsula last month in a laughable farce, called "Cyclone Sally." It is the plan of the new company to produce a fine play each month. A large number of the peninsula's most talented men and women are affiliating themselves with the company, which is eager to interview any person who is seriously inclined toward dramatics.

Suit was started this week by Ross & Ross, attorneys for the First National Bank of San Mateo County and the San Mateo County Savings Bank against the State of California for $8,085.90 for the return of taxes paid under protest for 1928-1929.

The First National Bank seeks the recovery of $5,417.42 and the San Mateo County Savings Bank the return of $2,668.48, alleged to have been paid the state, which "erroneously and illegally based the tax upon interest due but uncollected on capital stock."

Youth Held Here On Arson Charge

Ernest Sepulveda, 26, of this city, is being held at the county jail on a charge of arson, following the burning of a small house near the Middlefield road several weeks ago. Sepulveda was arrested in Monterey this week and brought to the jail here. His arrest followed investigations by the arson board of the state. At the jail Sepulveda is said to have confessed setting fire to the house and gave as his reason that he needed money for a payment on an automobile.

On Wednesday, District Attorney Swart filed an information against Sepulveda, and he is being held for questioning by the Superior Court. The complaint was sworn out by Mrs. Loretta Quinones, owner of the house.

Radios Shown In Theatre Display

A display of three outstanding makes of radio receiving sets is being arranged in the lobby of the Sequoia Theatre Sunday evening with the appearance at the theatre of Prof. Hermann Schnitzel, well-known radio fun maker. The display is being arranged by Boles Radio Den and is to feature Atwater Kent, Kolster and Brunswick sets.

"When your radio receiver makes this selection quickly, brings in music and speech clearly, gives you no trouble at all—you have the best radio," said Robert A. Boles, agent for the three makes of radio receiving sets.

"The new Atwater Kent AC set is that kind of a receiver and is not expensive.

"To make such a set, at a low price, requires more than good intentions; it requires a complete modern laboratory. It requires experience — and the Atwater Kent people have 26 years of it.

"It requires extreme care — and they assure such care with 222 tests or inspection of every set before it is shipped."

"The Kolster set has commanded a great deal of attention lately," said Boles, "because of its choice by Commander Byrd on both of his expeditions to the north pole and then on the one which he is now engaged to the south pole. On this expedition two Kolster Radio Compasses will be used at the base to determine the location of these exploring parties at all times. Eighteen aviators' helmets have been equipped with Kolster headsets. Two Kolster broadcast receivers and eight Kolster speakers will be used to entertain the party and to keep up morale during the tedious three-months voyage south and at the base village. Kolster equipment was chosen by Commander Byrd and his staff of radio experts because they found it dependable. The success and safety of the expedition will largely depend upon it. The equipment must withstand 150-mile gales and temperature changes from 125 degrees above while crossing the equator to 50 below in the Antartic.

The Brunswick line will be represented by some of the latest models of this well-known make. The Brunswick is a combination of the finest type of cabinet work with the finest type of electrical equipment. The receiving set of the Brunswick line is a product of the General Electric Company, and combines the latest developments in receiving sets.

The latest models of all three makes will be on display at the Sequoia theatre Sunday night.

Peaches on His Fellow-Murderers

To most Americans of today the name of Panama is associated with the building and operation of that tremendous monument to our national enterprise—the canal. But to the chief city of the Canal Zone attaches an ancient tradition which is so gory and so terrible that modern minds find difficulty to conceive it.

The imagination is daunted by the effort to recreate mentally a picture of the hideous scenes enacted on the Isthmus in the latter part of the Seventeenth century when the buccaneers under Captain Henry Morgan—afterwards Sir Henry Morgan, lieutenant-governor of Jamaica—were capturing and despoiling such rich Spanish strongholds as Panama, Porto Bello (in the present republic of Costa Rica), Maracaibo and St. Catharine.

Morgan himself looms in the history of this hemisphere as a brave, resourceful, conscienceless, treacherous, incredibly cruel, enormously greedy figure. He was a Welshman of good family who, according to tradition, was kidnaped as a boy in Bristol, carried off to the Caribbean and sold as a slave at Barbadoes. Having obtained his freedom, he turned pirate and, at heart, a pirate was what ever afterwards he remained. Because of the Spanish policy of the closed door against all other European nations, the fleets of the Spanish and their cities along the shores of the New World were preyed upon by freebooters—mainly Britishers, Frenchmen and Dutchmen—who called themselves by the picturesque title of "Brethren of the Coast." Among these ranging and ruthless pirateers Morgan rose to supremacy. For all that his soul was stained with the blood of thousands of helpless victims, his king knighted him and his government visited honors upon him.

Morgan's most outstanding exploit, next only to his taking of Panama with all its attendant horrors of massacre, torture of non-belligerents and slaughtering of helpless victims was the capture in 1668 of Porto Bello, then a storehouse of Spanish treasure and center of Spanish culture. In person, leading a small but indomitable rabble of nondescript ruffians Morgan took the doomed town from a much stronger defending garrison.

What followed its capture was told a very few years later by one of the murderous crew who had a hand in that desperate undertaking. This chronicler was one John Esquemling (or Esquemeling), a Dutchman who in 1666 came overseas in the service of the French West India company. While the memories of the infamies in which he had participated still were fresh in his mind, this Esquemling, becoming outwardly repentant, wrote in Dutch a record of Morgan's exploits along the Spanish Main. In 1684 his narrative was translated into English and it is from that translation I have drawn for the excerpts incorporated into this article.

WHAT this John Esquemling wrote was really a confession of hideous things in which he shared actively. That he wrote in the third person was undoubtedly due to his desire to escape the odium of being known as a pirate, and also the possible danger of being punished for his crimes. Yet more than once in his narrative unwittingly he betrayed himself. Indeed, the zeal of authorship led him actually to admit it. So, by his own words he stands accused of having been not alone a spectator, but a participant in the sacking of Porto Bello and Panama. Hypocritically he deplored the slaughter, the wholesale torturing, the rapine and the debauchery which marked the captures of those rich Latin-American cities, yet it is evident that his own hands were as deeply dyed with innocent blood, his own pockets as heavily laden with loot, as any perhaps among that murdering crew with which he served and whose villainies he subsequently denounced.

For instance, in one place, where he described Captain Morgan's mistreatment of a captured Spanish lady, he says:

"I myself was an eyewitness to these things here related."

Right there the moralizing buccaneer-historian convicted himself out of his own mouth. For Morgan carried with him none who as onlookers might afterwards be in position to testify regarding his infamies. Those who went with Morgan obeyed Morgan's orders and behaved after the heartless example which Morgan set for them. On that point we may be very sure.

Trapped and Blown to Pieces.

Again, later on, when he reached the point where Morgan treacherously sailed away, abandoning most of his followers, Esquemling was guilty of this second condemning slip of the pen:

"Captain Morgan left us in such a miserable condition as might serve for a lively representation of what reward wickedness at the latter end of life."

So, in reading the following extracts from his chronicle, we should bear in mind that we are reading the accounts of an actor and not merely a member of the audience.

There is scarcely a line of this story but seems literally to drip with the blood of the victims. Here, near the beginning of the chapter devoted to the taking of Porto Bello is a characteristic bit of bloodcurdling atrocity:

"Being thus posted under the walls of the castle (an outpost of the fortifications) Captain Morgan commanded a sentry whom he had taken prisoner to speak unto those that were within, charging them to surrender and deliver themselves up to his discretion—otherwise they should be all cut to pieces, without giving quarter to anyone. But they would hearken to none of these threats, beginning instantly to fire; which gave notice unto the city, and this was suddenly alarmed.

"Yet, notwithstanding, although the governor and soldiers of the said castle made as great resistance as could be performed, they were constrained to surrender unto the pirates. These no sooner had taken the castle but they resolved to be as good as their words, in putting the Spaniards to the sword, thereby to strike a terror into the rest of the city. Hereupon, having shut up all the soldiers and officers as prisoners into one room, they instantly set fire to the powder (whereof they found great quantity) and blew up the whole castle into the air, with all the Spaniards that were within.

Ladders of Death.

"This being done, they pursued the course of their victory, falling upon the city. . . . One party of the pirates, being assigned to this purpose, ran immediately to the cloisters and took as many religious men and women as they could find."

The purpose of this rounding-up of nuns and priests and monks was very soon made manifest. For, having failed to take the inner citadel by assault and by the use of wands flung over the walls, and having suffered heavy losses from the fire of the gallant defenders, Morgan undertook a special plan for bringing the governor and his garrison to terms. The narrator proceeds with his ghastly description:

"Therefore, he ordered ten or twelve ladders to be made, so broad that three or four men at once might ascend by them. These being finished, he commanded all the religious men and women whom he had taken prisoners to fix them against the walls of the castle. Thus much he had beforehand threatened the governor to perform in case he delivered not the castle. Captain Morgan was much persuaded that the governor would not employ his utmost forces, seeing religious women and ecclesiastical persons exposed in the front of the soldiers to the greatest dangers.

"Thus the ladders, as I have said, were put into the hands of religious persons of both sexes; and these were forced, at the head of the companies, to raise and apply them to the walls. But Captain Morgan was fully deceived in his judgment of this design. For the governor, who acted like a brave and courageous soldier, refused not, in performance of his duty, to use his utmost endeavors to destroy whosoever came near the walls. The religious men and women ceased not to cry unto him and beg of him by all the saints of heaven he would deliver the castle and thereby spare both his and their own lives. But nothing could prevail with the obstinacy and fierceness that had possessed the governor's mind. Thus many of the religious men and nuns were killed before they could fix the ladders—which at last being done, though with great loss of the said religious people, the pirates mounted them in great numbers, and with no less valor, having fireballs in their hands, and earthen pots full of powder—all which things, being now at the top of the walls, they kindled and cast in among the Spaniards.

Violence After the Fighting.

"This effort of the pirates was very great, insomuch as the Spaniards could no longer resist nor defend the castle, which was now entered. Hereupon they all threw down their arms and craved quarter for their lives. Only the governor of the city would admit or crave no mercy, but rather killed many of the pirates with his own hands, and not a few of his own soldiers because they did not stand to their arms. And, although the pirates asked him if he would have quarter, yet he constantly answered: 'By no means: I had rather die as a valiant soldier than be hanged as a coward.

"They endeavored as much as they could, to take him prisoner. But he defended himself so obstinately that they were forced to kill him, notwithstanding all the cries and tears of his own wife and daughter, who begged of him upon their knees he would demand quarter and save his life. When the pirates had possessed themselves of the castle, which was about night, they enclosed therein all the prisoners they had taken, placing the women and men by themselves with some guards upon them. All the wounded were put into a certain apartment by itself, to the intent their own complaints might be the cure of their diseases, for no other was afforded them."

The night which followed was a night out of Dante's Inferno.

"Now," says the virtuous Esquemling, "they fell to eating and drinking after their usual manner—that is to say, committing in both these things all manner of debauchery and excess. These two vices were immediately followed by many attacks committed upon very honest women, as well married as virgins, who being threatened with the sword were constrained to submit to the violence of these wicked men. After such manner they delivered themselves up to all sort of debauchery of this kind, that if there had been found only fifty courageous men they might easily have retaken the city, and killed all the pirates."

Morgan Scares the Governor.

The coming of dawn brought no respite to the ravished city. Esquemling tells quite casually what ensued:

"The next day, having plundered all they could find, they began to examine some of the prisoners (who had been persuaded by their companions to say they were the richest of the town), charging them severely to discover where they had hidden their riches and goods. But, not being able to extort anything out of them, as they were not the right persons who possessed any wealth, they at last resolved to torture them. This they performed with such cruelty that many of them died upon the rack or presently after."

For fifteen days the carnival of unutterable horror continued, "in which space of time," so the writer naively admits, "they" (the captors) "had lost many of their own men, both by unhealthiness of the country and the extravagant debaucheries they had committed."

Meanwhile, Morgan was loading his ships with pillage and victualing them preliminary to his return to Cuba; meanwhile, also, he was exchanging messages under flags of truce with the governor of Panama, to whom sometimes Esquemling refers as the president. At first the latter threatened destruction upon the presumptuous little force which had invaded the Central American mainland. But when Morgan countered with threats of razing Porto Bello to the ground unless the Spaniards bought him off with fabulous ransoms, the governor began to sing a different tune.

Esquemling furnishes the sequel:

"The governor of Panama perceived by this answer no means would serve to modify the hearts of the pirates, nor reduce them to reason. Hereupon he determined to leave those of the city, whom he came to relieve, involved in the difficulties of making the best agreement they could with their enemies. Thus in a few days more the miserable citizens gathered the contribution wherein they were fined, and brought the entire sum of 100,000 pieces-of-eight unto the pirates. . . . But the president of Panama, by these transactions, was brought into an extreme admiration, considering that four hundred men had been able to take such a great city with so many strong castles, especially seeing they had no pieces of cannon nor other great guns; and what was more, knowing that the citizens of Porto Bello had always great repute of being good soldiers themselves, and who had never wanted courage in their own defense.

Kept His Promise.

"This astonishment was so great that it occasioned him to send a message unto Captain Morgan, desiring him to send him some small pattern of those arms wherewith he had taken with such violence so great a city. Captain Morgan received this messenger very kindly and treated him with great civility. Which being done, he gave him a pistol and a few small bullets of lead to carry back unto the president, his master, telling him withal: He desired him to accept that slender pattern of the arms wherewith he had taken Porto Bello, and keep them for a twelvemonth; after which time he promised to come to Panama and fetch them away."

How that ironical promise was carried out and how within three years Panama on a still greater scale suffered the fate of its lesser sister-city makes one of the grimmest and goriest chapters in the history of the New world.

Esquemling, still concealing his real role under the spectator's disguise, concludes his tale of the first successful expedition against the Latin-Americas with a final bit of philosophizing:

"Captain Morgan, having provided his fleet with all necessaries, and taken with him the best guns of the castle, set sail from Porto Bello with all his ships. With these he arrived in a few days unto the island of Cuba, where he sought out a place wherein with all quiet and repose he might make the dividend of the spoils they had gotten . . . they sailed again thence into their common place of rendevouz, Jamaica. Being arrived, they passed here some time in all sorts of vices and debauchery, according to their common manner of doing, spending with huge prodigality what others had gained with no small labor and toil."

Insects That Evince Craving for Alcohol

That drunkenness and its consequences are not peculiar to human beings is evident from the fact that wasps greedily attack certain fruits when they are overripe—that is to say, when the sugar which they contain has decomposed into alcohol. On such fruits, particularly grapes and plums, wasps may be seen pushing and fighting in numbers, much larger than can be accommodated, and they will be seen to grow very drunk and to crawl away in a semisomnolent condition to repose in the grass for some time until they get over the "bout," when they are ready to go at it again.

One investigator who was stung by a drunken wasp suffered severely from symptoms of nerve poisoning for several days.

When potted lilacs, set in tightly-closed cases, are placed beside a receptacle full of ether, the ether volatilizes and within 36 hours the lilacs are in a state of torpor closely resembling intoxication. If the plants are then sprinkled with fresh water and set in a warm hothouse, where the humidity is sufficient, at the end of the fifteenth day they will show abnormal development.

But not all plants thrive under such conditions. The rose is refractory to the treatment. The carnation pink and hyacinth, however, show a deplorable taste for the alcohols or ethers which produce intoxication.

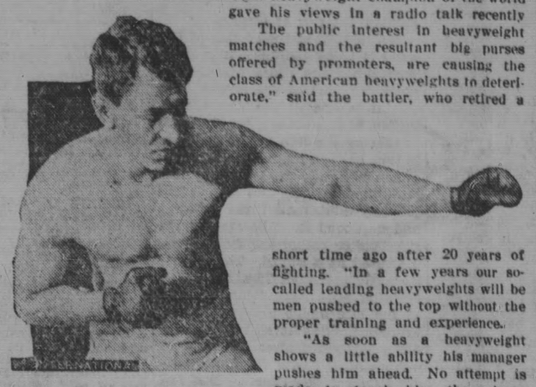
Big Purses Hurt Boxing Game

BATTLING LEVINSKY thinks big purses "are ruining American heavyweight fighters and in a few years this country will find itself in the same unfortunate condition that England did ten or fifteen years ago." The former light heavyweight champion of the world gave his views in a radio talk recently



Battling Levinsky.

The public interest in heavyweight matches and the resultant big purses offered by promoters, are causing the class of American heavyweights to deteriorate," said the battler, who retired a short time ago after 20 years of fighting. "In a few years our so-called leading heavyweights will be men pushed to the top without the proper training and experience.

"As soon as a heavyweight shows a little ability his manager pushes him ahead. No attempt is made to teach him the science of the game. Why, in a few years we'll have a corps of heavyweights such as England had in Bombardier Wells and Gunner Moir. As soon as they meet a good man they take the count in one or two rounds.

"Only one heavyweight in this country today knows the real art of boxing. That's Tommy Loughran. He'll last longer than the rest, too, for he knows how to take care of himself. The others don't. It will be impossible to keep Tommy from the title, for when you can't hit a man you can't beat him. No heavyweight can hit Loughran today."

Idealism Is Limited in Recreation of Football

The season just ended proved that idealism is limited in football.

The game has entered the realm of big success.

Since it is big business it demands business methods.

When universities spend more than a million dollars for football plants, as many of our leading universities have done and are doing, they play with big money, as the illiterate express it.

Those stadiums must be paid for, and the way to pay for them is to produce winning fotball elevens. That fact is generally and thoroughly established. No university can pay off its bonded indebtedness in football with "B" teams. Nor can it pay off that indebtedness with two teams of equal strength. And as long as our leading universities apply big business methods, it will be just as well for all concerned to drop the "B" team plan into the waste paper basket and await the dawn of a gridiron Utopia.

Trap Shooting at Night Tried in Massachusetts

Golf, baseball and football have been very successfully played at night in the glow of a modern outdoor lighting system and now trap-shooting has been added to the list. Under midnight skies and 2,000,000 candlepower in electric floodlights, three veteran trap-shooters, the oldest of whom was eighty-one, broke anywhere from 19 to 23 clay pigeons out of a possible 25. This happened at the first night-time trap-shoot meet ever held, a gallery of 400 spectators looking on. The night shoot took place on the range of the Lynn Fish and Game association, Lynn, Mass. Subsequently the range was thrown open to others, and William Hill, of Bridgeport, Conn., made a perfect score of 25 hits out of 25 birds.

Blue Larkspur Is Early Pick for Kentucky Derby

Blue Larkspur, E. R. Bradley's early season two-year-old sensation, has been made winter book favorite by Thomas Kearney of St. Louis, nationally known betting commissioner.

Although no entries for the big event will be available for about two months or more, Kearney announced his prices against some of the leading contenders.

Blue Larkspur, at 8 to 1, was made first choice, rather to the surprise of turfmen who figured that High Strung's victories in the Belmont and Pimlico futurities would give him the advantage.

High Strung was rated at 10 to 1 against, equal second choice with Ervast, Baron Long's fast flyer.

Harry Lake Retained

The Reading club plans to offer Harry Lake, veteran catcher, another contract. Manager Hinchman recently made the player a free agent when he asked for his release, but events now make it desirable that he return. It seems that the Cubs are not so sure they will send Catcher Denny Murphy to the Reading club, having other plans for his disposal. This means that Hinchman will have to have somebody to help Lena Styles, and Lake probably will be the man.

JOCKEY IS RICH, BUT WON'T QUIT

Millionaire Rider of Australia Still a Winner.

England has her Steve Donoghue and the United States has her Fator, but Australia believes she has in old Bobby Lewis one of the world's greatest jockeys.

Certainly his record is the most singular of any jockey riding on any international track.

Lewis is forty-nine years old. He is reputed to be worth over a $1,000,000. He has ridden the winner of the Melbourne cup four times and to Australians the Melbourne cup stands on the same shelf with the wreaths of the English and Kentucky derbies.

Old Bobby made of himself a national hero when he won the big race on Trivalve, a 6-to-1 shot, and in giving him an ovation the 100,000 spectators paid tribute to a pair that won more than $100,000 in purses during the season.

In addition to winning the Melbourne cup, Lewis and Trivalve won the $35,000 Sydney derby, the $25,000 Sydney derby and several other less important races and purses.

There was a long stretch of 23 years between Lewis' third and four cup victories. He won his third victory on Sylvanite in 1904, and, in the meantime almost a generation of young jockeys came and passed while the old veteran continued to keep his place at the top of the winning lists.

Being the possessor of a fortune that assures him a life of ease when he hangs up his boots, Lewis' friends frequently have urged him to retire and avoid the chance of being injured.

"I am still young, why should I retire?" he asks.

"Race riding is not a business or a profession with me. It is recreation, and away from the track I would not be happy.

"Happiness means more to me than money. And also I want to be on a few more cup winners before I quit."

Swallows Whistle

A basket ball game at Albion, Mich., between Hillsdale and Albion high schools had to be stopped because one of the timekeepers, George Mather, Albion college freshman, swallowed his whistle. It was an intensely exciting game, the score being tied 22-all at the close of the regular playing time. Mather drew in his breath to make the whistle sound above the crowd's yelling. Suddenly the hard rubber mouthpiece came off and slipped down his throat. The game was stopped while a physician removed the piece of rubber, after which the game was resumed, Hillsdale scoring two baskets in the overtime period to win 26-22.

Will Change Fielding and Batting of Cissell

Manager "Lena" Blackburne plans to get a bumper crop of base hits and sparkling field plays from the "$123,000 White Sox Peach," Bill Cissell.

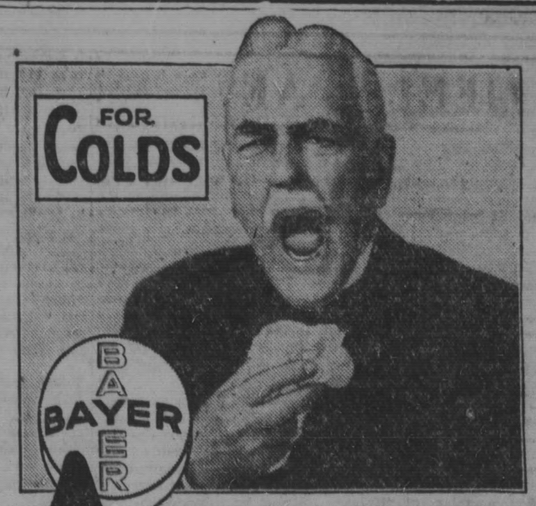
Cissell, obtained from Portland for $123,000, failed to hit and field for that amount of money during the 1928 campaign, but "Lena" still insists he is a "find," and intends to prove it.

Blackburne intends to revolutionize Cissell's hitting and fielding. He plans to make a "punch hitter" out of him instead of letting him take a full swing, and to teach him to wait for the bounce instead of "stiff-arming" the ball.

"Just watch and see the difference," "Lena" said. "Cissell is going to be one of the greatest baseball players yet. He is a natural."

Caldwell to Help

Charley Caldwell, former Princeton athlete who turned out a champion football eleven as head coach at Williams last fall, will assist Art Fox with the Purple baseball nine this spring. Fox was one of Caldwell's assistants with the Williams eleven and helped materially in making the gridiron season a success. A better chance will be offered to get a line on the material when the candidates report for practice sometime this spring.



ASPIRIN

To break a cold harmlessly and in a hurry try a Bayer Aspirin tablet. And for headache. The action of Aspirin is very efficient, too, in cases of neuralgia, neuritis, even rheumatism and lumbago! And there's no after effect; doctors give Aspirin to children—often infants. Whenever there's pain, think of Aspirin. The genuine Bayer Aspirin has Bayer on the box and on every tablet. All druggists, with proven directions.

Food Value of Apple Makes It Important

Nutrition and Diet says: "The apple leads among the orchard fruits as an important food. It carries small amounts of vitamines A, B and C. It has definite laxative properties, probably owing to the large cellulose content. The young apple contains a large amount of starch, but as it ripens this is rapidly converted into sugar until when fully ripe it contains little or no starch. The acid content decreases as the sugar increases. In like manner its pectin, valuable in the formation of jelly, decreases with the ripening process. The citrus fruits are next in importance to the apple, and their culture is being enormously increased. Oranges come first. They offer an excellent source of readily assimilable glucose, and for this reason orange juice is used when there is necessity for quickly assimilated carbohydrate which will throw the least burden on the digestive organs. The orange contains both vitamines A and B."

A Borax Rinse

After washing, clothes should always be given a final Borax rinse. Half a cupful of 20 Mule Team Borax in this rinse water insures extra healthful cleanliness, for Borax is a mild antiseptic and deodorant.—Adv.

Prefer Elephants to Tractors in Congo

How supposedly untamable African elephants are trained by Belgian Congo officials to become farm servants, each equivalent to a tractor "plus," is disclosed by members of a Harvard expedition recently returned from Africa.

The "plus" in the elephant's favor is that after doing a day's work equivalent to that of a tractor he gathers his food free of cost in the forest, where it grows wild, while the gasoline "feed" of tractors is expensive in the Congo.

African elephants long had a reputation for incurable ferocity, and the accomplishment of the Belgians in learning how to domesticate them is new. The successful training is due to catching the elephants young. Numbers of them have been given to settlers for farm work.

A Fitting Fate

It's easy enough to be grouchy when everything goes dead wrong; but the man who will swear when he's walking on air, is the man whom I sing in this song.

It's easy enough to be grumpy when life seems as gay as a hearse, but the man who will bleat when his luck is complete is the theme of this rollicking verse. It is easy enough to be gloomy, when, dismal and doleful and downed; but the guy who will yell when he's wealthy and well should be tied to a boulder and drowned.—A. L. L. in Judge.

Amphibious Spider

Water-Spider is an interesting little animal which spins a sac of silk on a water plant, which it uses as a sort of diving bell. From this it obtains bubbles of air, one at a time. Thus the spider is enabled to remain below the surface a considerable time.

Everybody reads a "best seller," but a lot of people, having read it, may say it is no good.

MENLO PARK

P. T. A. Regular Meeting

The Menlo Park P. T. A. held their regular monthly meeting at the Central School house Friday, February 8th. It being Founders' Day a short program apropriate to the occasion was rendered. A committee was appointed to purchase a cot and blankets to be placed in the school house to be used in case of acidents or sickness. Among the school children. It was decided to have the school nurse report all needy children to the P.-T. A. for investigation. The Home Section met at Mrs. F. S. Becker's Wednesday afternoon to sew for the proposed bazaar.

Building Campaign Presbyterian Church Proceeds Rapidly

The building campaign of the Menlo Park Presbyterian church proceeded rapidly on last Sunday, which was the special day set for the receiving of subscriptions to the enterprise. There was a large number of interested attendants at the church who knew that the matter was to be presented and were ready to help the movement along. As a result about $7,400 was subscribed. The building that is contemplated is a Sunday School unit of a Spanish type structure that will be a credit to the community. The cost of this unit is estimated by the architect to be approximately $10,000.

Those leading in the campaign hope that the amount will be oversubscribed so as to provide the necessary equipment as well as the building. There are many other friends who have not yet expressed their interest by subscriptions who are to be interviewed. Some are volunteering help on the ground that it is a great public enterprise of great value to the community as a whole.

The old building which has been in use for 55 years and is still in good repair will continue to be used as the chapel of worship until such time as the growth of the community will require the unit which will complete the plan. This is a church in which many of the pioneers of the community were interested. It has served well in its day. The present program of the church with its emphasis on Sunday School and Young Peoples work and various social activities, requires additional room and equipment. This is the intent of the present campaign.

Sudden Death of Mrs. Broggi

The sudden death of Mrs. Bambina Broggi, a pioneer resident of Menlo Park last Saturday afternoon was a shock to her relatives and friends. She became ill that morning, suddenly passing away later in the day. The funeral took place on Tuesday morning at the Church of the Nativity, where a solemn requiem high mass was celebrated for the repose of her soul. The cortege to Holy Cross cemetery was made up of sorrowing relatives and friends. The remains were laid alongside those of her husband and daughter, Madeline, who predeceased her some years. Mrs. Broggi was a good Christian woman, a devoted mother and a kind friend. Where suffering and sorrows came she was first to give her assistance, to offer kind words of sympathy and help to assuage the pain of the afflicted. Nearly seventy years ago this good woman was born in a small village near Milan, Italy. Growing to beautiful womanhood, surrounded by a peaceful and charming atmosphere in a land noted for the warmth of its sunshine the glory of its floral beauty and exquisite coloring and in the full bloom of delightful maidenhood, she departed from her native hearth coming to the Land of the Free and the Home of the Brave, arriving in Menlo Park over forty years ago. Here her children were born, she devoting her best energies and unstinted labors to their unbringing. They are all worthy examples of her care and wise teachings.

Long will Mrs. Broggi live, not only in the memory of her children, but in the memory of her friends in Menlo Park, where she lived so long. She is survived by three daughters, Miss Rose Broggi, Mrs. Harry Morey and Mrs. Boyd Braden, all of Menlo Park.

Fifteen Pound Baby Boy

A fifteen-pound baby boy was born to Mr. and Mrs. George Brown of Menlo Park at the Palo Alto hospital last Saturday. The bouncing boy and his mother are getting along nicely.

The committee on the St. Patrick's day celebration is busy with its program for that occasion. Here is a portion of it: Miss Dorothy Klemm, Gaelic dancing, best on coast; Skit by students of St. Mary's College; Playette by Notre Dame Academy of Belmont; Dr. J. C. McGovern, monologist, in his latest wisecracks; Sheriff McGrath, in his latest specialites accompanied by his two deputies; Boy Wonder in song, name to be announced later; Raymond Tinney on miramba; Delightful Thyspian, Mrs. James Martin of San Carlos in several novelties.

Council to Meet Tuesday

The town council will meet in regular session next Tuesday evening. It is rumored that the council will at that time call a special election to recall two members of that board. The election will probly take place sometime in April.

Painted Interior of Church

The interior of the Church of Nativity is being painted. It is many years since the brush appeared in the inner part of the edifice. The church is one of the first erected in San Mateo county, being started in 1871 by the late Father Dempsey in the Coleman tract. In 1878 it was moved to its present location by the late James Flood, who bought the property and moved the building and improved it. The rear of the structure or rather the sacristy was first used as a school. This was in the early seventies. The first teacher being Miss Nora Sullivan, sister of the late Judge Sullivan of San Francisco. She is still living and for many years after leaving here was connected with the San Francisco School department. But few of those she taught in those days of long ago are living, she surviving the greater number of them. Father Dempsey visited the school regularly from San Mateo. Miss Sullivan had a thriving class of youngsters, many of whom afterwards made records in the different lines of endeavor in various parts of the state.

The old church has had many pastors and thousands have worshipped within its walls. Many of those whom Miss Sullivan taught were wedded within the edifice and too, many were buried from there. The old land mark stands as a link between the past and the present and continues giving comfort and spiritual aid to the weary and heavy laden.
